8 Motions concerning Procedure or Order

8.1 Motions concerning procedure or order of business may be moved by any delegate without notice and at any time other than when a speech is in progress. Such motions shall have precedence over other business. The President may allow one delegate to speak for and one to speak against the motion and then put the motion to the vote. Motions falling under this category include proposals to adjourn the discussion or the session, motions to take the vote and challenges to the President’s ruling.

8.2 A point of order, other than a procedural motion, shall be taken immediately. The President shall then give a ruling on the point of order, which, unless successfully challenged, shall be final.

9 Speakers and Time Limits

9.1 Guests may be allowed to address Congress by arrangement with the Standing Orders Committee and the invitation of the President.

9.2 Applications by delegates wishing to speak shall be made to the President on the appropriate form of notice. The President shall normally call upon the speakers in the order in which applications have been handed in. A delegate may not speak twice on a question without the prior permission of the President.

9.3 Speaking time for rapporteurs shall be at the discretion of the President. All other speakers shall be limited to five minutes except in the case of speakers addressing the report of the Resolutions Committee who shall be limited to two minutes. With the approval of Congress the President may fix a shorter speaking time than five minutes.
